

Artist Statement

As an artists I am always challenging my limits. Art gives individuals the ability to put their skills to the test. Ultimately, art gives people power. Power to make decisions. Power to decide what message they want to get across. In life, we are often told what is right and what is wrong but through art there is never one way. In the beginning of my art career, I found myself just trying to learn the basics. However, now I find that I am designing what I have learned into a form or message. Art is a continual journey that has no definitive end. I love art because as an artists I am always learning something new.

I create art because it is a way of expressing a message without having to speak. However, it is also a way of allowing others to communication. When an artist creates a composition it is not always clear as to what they are trying to convey then it is up to the viewer to decide. There is nothing like going to a gallery and just observing how people respond to a composition. One truly needs to be open to anything interpretation! I create art to inspire people to challenge their limits. I never thought that in my career, I would be able to accomplish what I have over the years and I look forward to what is beyond the horizon.
